...external appearance of the schooner to denote her character; not a gun or small arm of any kind was visible. All but a few of the men constituting her crew were secreted below deck. There, too, was hidden away a valuable cargo, captured from British merchantmen. The problem was to keep the English men-of-war's men from going below should they board the brig; also to convince them that there was no one of the few countrymen, stupid looking Yankees worth impressing into the naval service of his Britannic Majesty. Only the laukkest looking privateersmen slouched about. Israel and a man known as "Ben" did the talking and the fiddling whilst the frigate hailed the Newburyport craft. After a round shot or two had been fired across her how to attract the attention of the unconscious Yankees to the fact that they were within effective range of the English frigate a colloquy was begun by the aid of a speaking trumpet. Exactly how he fooled the Britisher, Israel Hildreth used to rehearse with vacuous face and nasal, high-pitched yankee twang. Like the story of the "Arkansas Traveller", a violent action is necessary. "Schooner ahoy I" roared the English captain, "Heave-to, or I'll sink you." There was no response or attention apparently paid to this threat, although Israel's muscles were as tense as his fiddiestrings. Boom Zip-zip-zip, and a cannon ball ricocheted some distance ahead of the schooner. Then the riddle was heard playing very soft and slow as the Yankee, roused from his careless rhapsody, drawled out, "Gosh!" 'Schooner ahoy-oh! Heave to, or I'll sink you!" came the reiterated demand, from the frigate flying the cross of St. George. "Goshness!" ejaculated the surprised Israel, as he and the other ...
